A man lived in a small town. He lived happily with his wife and son in a beautiful house with a backyard. But as his son  up, the man noticed that he was starting to show bad behavior. The boy got angry very often and said bad words to others out of anger. The man told his son to stop  it, but he did not. The boy's words started hurting others. He even got angry with his friends at school. The man thought, "If he continues behaving like this, he may  his friends." Actually, the boy's friends started to ignore him. His mother was also worried about him. The man thought about ways to improve his son's behavior and thought of a good idea.

One morning, the man  his son in his bedroom. He gave the boy a hammer and a bag which was full of nails. He told the boy to hammer the nails into the wooden fence in the backyard when he got angry. At first, the boy did not understand  his father wanted to say. However, hammering nails was a way to relieve stress for the boy, so  he decided to hammer nails on the fence. On the first day, he hammered 43 nails into the fence.  Hammering nails was fun but sometimes difficult. That night, the man asked his son to notice how often he got angry. The boy thought about  it, and then, he began to control his anger.

The boy noticed when and how he got angry.  Over the next few weeks, he tried to control his anger, and the number of nails he hammered into the fence decreased little by little.  That meant that he did not get angry once that day. When the boy told his father about this, his father said, "From now, every time you feel that you managed to control your anger, take out one nail from the fence."

A few weeks later, the boy said to his father, " I took out all the nails." He was very happy because he was able to change his bad behavior.  The man took his son to the wooden fence in the backyard. The man said, "I am happy because you have learned to control your anger. But look at the holes in the fence. This fence can never be restored. When you say bad words to others in anger, you leave scars like these  in their hearts. Even if you say 'sorry' after that,  they will never go away."
